Let's work together to keep children safe.

Recovered

EMCOR Group, Inc. launched the EMCOR Taking KidSafety to the Street™ campaign in the United States with NCMEC (National Center for Missing and Exploited Children) in September 2005.

- Two 14-year-old girls were abducted while walking 12 blocks to a store, and they were taken by their abductors to a closed state park. A county deputy on a routine patrol of the closed park noticed the car, investigated, and rescued the girls.
- A 17-year-old girl was abducted by an ex-boyfriend. She was rescued after her mother received a call from the girl's employer. The mother became alarmed, drove to the work place, and found the abandoned car. The police located and rescued the girl.
- Many of the stories of children recovered have happy endings – although sadly, some do not. But perhaps worst of all for families of missing children are the ending that never come. Thousands of missing children are never located or identified.

But there are victories every day – a 3-year-old girl was found just under twelve months after disappearing from her home. A non-custodial parent had abducted and taken her to a neighbouring state. She was recovered and brought home safely with the help of missing child posters displayed on EMCOR UK vehicles.

If we can help find just one child...

Keeping kids safer is everyone's business. EMCOR UK not only takes that responsibility to heart, we've taken it to the street. Our vehicles travel roads and highways all over the country, and now our nationwide fleet displays missing child posters from The UK Missing Persons Bureau. Look out for them—remember the faces—help us make a difference.

Our communities. Our children. Our future.
